

WM. A. TENNILLE.

JANUARY 13, 1832.

Mr. FORD, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, made the following

REPORT:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the petition of William A. Tennille, a soldier of the late war, report:

That the petitioner entered the service of his country, as a volunteer, in the year 1813; that, shortly after, was appointed Quartermaster Sergeant, in which capacity he served in the battle fought with the Creek Indians, at Artosse, on the Tallapoosa river; at which time, received a gun shot from the enemy in his right arm, which rendered amputation immediately necessary to preserve his life. In addition, Brigadier General John Floyd, who was commander of the Georgia State troops, at the battle of Artosse, on the 27th day of December, 1813, states, under oath, that the petitioner, a private in Capt. Saml. S. Steet's troop of dragoons, was appointed Quartermaster Sergeant to the squadron of cavalry commanded by Major Freeman.

That, at the battle of Artosse, on the 27th December, 1813, between a party of his command and a large body of Indians; that, whilst the petitioner was advancing upon the enemy, received a gun shot wound in his right arm, which rendered amputation near the shoulder immediately necessary to preserve his life. That, in consequence of his disability, was, by him, discharged from the balance of his tour, for which he had voluntarily enlisted. The committee are, therefore, of opinion the petitioner is entitled to his prayer; and report a bill.

REPORT

The Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred the petition of William A. Tennille, a soldier of the late war, report:

That the petitioner entered the service of his country, as a volunteer, in the year 1812; that, shortly after, was appointed Quartermaster Sergeant, in which capacity he served in the battle fought with the Creek Indians, at Artope, on the Tallapoosa river, at which time, receiving a gun shot from the enemy in his right arm, which rendered amputation immediately necessary to preserve his life. In addition, Brigadier General John Floyd, who was commander of the Georgia State troops, at the battle of Artope, on the 27th day of December, 1812, states, under oath, that the petitioner, a private in Capt. Saml. S. Stoeck's troop of dragoons, was appointed Quartermaster Sergeant to the squadron of cavalry commanded by Major Floyd.

That at the battle of Artope, on the 27th December, 1812, between a party of his command and a large body of Indians; that, whilst the petitioner was advancing upon the enemy, received a gun shot wound in his right arm, which rendered amputation near the shoulder immediately necessary to preserve his life. That, in consequence of his disability, was, by him, discharged from the balance of his term, for which he had voluntarily enlisted. The committee are, therefore, of opinion the petitioner is entitled to his pay; and report a bill.
